

Important Information about Capital Gains Distributions: October 2022

To assist you with your year-end investment and tax planning, this document contains the following information:

Capital Gains Estimates. A list of Cavanal Hill funds that we anticipate will have capital gains distributions in December 2022, along with the preliminary estimates of those distributions. Actual capital gains information will be available here when that information becomes available. The capital gains distributions as of September 30, 2022 are estimates and are subject to change between now and the expected payment dates due to market movements and other factors. It is important to note that Cavanal Hill funds not included on this list may also pay capital gains distributions in December 2022.

Our Distribution Calendar. Our December 2022 distribution calendar shows the current schedule of capital gains ex-dates for each Cavanal Hill fund, including funds that do not have estimated capital gain distributions as of September 30, 2022. The ex-date for all funds is the date prior to the payable date, and the record date for capital gains distributions is one business day prior to the ex-date and two business days prior to the payable date.

Glossary Explanations of the different dates (e.g. Ex-Date, Record Date) can be found on page 4 of this document.

Why do Funds Make Year-End Distributions?

The Internal Revenue Code requires mutual funds to pay out 98% of their calendar year net investment income and 98.2% of their capital gains realized for the twelve months ended October 31 of each year to avoid excise penalty taxes at the fund level. Many funds declare dividends and capital gains distributions in December of each year to avoid those taxes. Unless fund shares are held in a 401(k) plan, IRA 403(b)(7) account or other tax-advantaged product those distributions are taxable, even if the distributions are reinvested in additional mutual fund shares.

Should I Sell or Exchange My Shares to Avoid a Capital Gains Distribution?

Because every individual's tax and investment considerations are different, you should consult your tax or financial advisor.

Some Additional Reminders about Distributions:

- Distributions may also be subject to state and local income taxes.
- Selling or exchanging shares just prior to an anticipated distribution but buying them back later may trigger wash sale consequences, depending on the timing of the transactions.
- A purchase of shares just prior to a dividend or capital gain distribution results in a portion of the purchase price being returned to the investor as a taxable distribution.
- Corporations, trusts, partnerships, and other types of entities that own fund shares may have special tax considerations.

Estimated Year-End Distributions of Capital Gains (as of 9/30/22)

This preliminary information on September 30, 2022 represents estimates that are subject to change, and may not include all funds that may pay capital gains distributions in December 2022. Our December 2022 distribution calendar on page 3 shows the current schedule of capital gains ex-dates for each Cavanal Hill fund, including funds that do not have estimated capital gain distributions as of September 30, 2022. For explanations of the different dates (e.g. Ex-Date, Record Date), see page 4 of this document.

For shares held in taxable accounts, short-term capital gains distributions are taxed to individuals at ordinary income rates. Long-term capital gains distributions are generally taxed at long-term capital gains rates, no matter how long shares have been held. The data shown below does not include estimates of payments of dividends from net investment income (which are taxed to individuals as ordinary income). It is important to note that mutual funds may make capital gains distributions even if the net asset value per share of the fund has decreased during the tax year.

Dividend Dates Defined

Mutual Funds

Anyone who is a shareholder of record on the Record Date will receive the distribution, if any, on the Payment Date. Mutual funds trade once a day, after the markets close on that trading date. Therefore, anyone who purchases shares of a mutual fund before or on the Record Date will receive any distributions on the Payment Date. Those who sell their shares on or before the Record Date will not receive the distribution on the Payment Date.

Record Date: If you are a shareholder in a fund on this date, you will receive the distribution, if any.

Ex-Date: On the ex-date, the fund's share price drops by the amount of the distribution that will be paid for each share, excluding adjustment for market fluctuations.

Payment Date: The date the distribution is paid out to shareholders.

Cavanal Hill may elect to treat certain dividends that it pays after the close of a tax year as having been paid during that tax year for purposes of the RIC distribution requirements and determining the RIC's taxable income. These so-called spillback dividends are taxable to shareholders in the year they are actually received.
